The Unexpected Gift Thanks to Gael Goldsack

We were just leaving the park after our evening walk when a car drew up beside us and the window was wound down. "Can the children say hello to your big dog?", the woman sitting in the front seat asked.
I turned so Paddy, our 15 month old Irish Wolfhound, who already stood at 850 mm , could be see more easily by the children, her big shaggy head now only a short distance from the windows of the car.
The children in the back seat detached themselves from their seatbelts and clambered over each other to be first at the window to pat this wonderful big dog who looked so unkempt and friendly.
My attention was focused on the three children in the back, all talking at once and asking questions about how much did she eat, where did she sleep, did she do as she was told, so I was slow to notice the smallest child, quietly on her mother's lap in the front of the car, reach out to pat Paddy. Paddy was not so slow, especially since the outstretched hand waving just beside her head contained the very soggy, chewed remains of a biscuit.
In a flash Paddy had helped herself to the unexpected gift of biscuit and was busily cleaning the remains from the grubby hand before either the mother or I realised what had happened.

Fortunately, Paddy is very gentle when she takes food from the hand, and the little child seemed to enjoy the tickling sensation of her hand receiving the personalised cleaning service from such a large, friendly looking dog. I think even the mother appreciated the fact that there was one less hand to clean that day, and from that day on, Paddy looked at every passing car with renewed interest.

How Much Do I Love Thee

Thoughts to think while holding the cutest puppy in the world and wondering whether you should get involved.

How much do l love thee? Let me count the ways.
Will I love you when you puddle for nineteen continuous days,
on that gorgeous Persian carpet that my friends have all admired?
Will I love you when I find you on my pillow when you're tired?
Will I love your muddy paw prints when you chase a butterfly from the garden through the kitchen- when the floor wax isn't dry?
Will I love you when you're shedding and all day I vacuum hair?
When in digging you demolish ten begonias raised with care?
Will I love you just past midnight when I let you out and then-
I let you in - then let you out - then let you in - again?
Will I love you when you're lunching on a most expensive shoe?
(true you didn't touch the other, but I sort of needed two),
The day you ate the birthday cake, will I forgive - forget?
Oh how much will I love you as I go to pay the vet for binding up with tenderness that nasty little gash you got while decorating the lawn with all our trash?
Will I love you when you're sandy, dripping water from the beach
as I chase you 'cross the carpet and you stay just out of reach?
At these times let me remember how cute you look today
and sigh and tell myself - I love you - anyway.
 They rough-house, rumble & tumble with their litter mates & their mother.
When the game becomes too rough, the 'hurt' pup utters a sharp, high pitched squeak & the game stops. Puppies don't bear grudges & will soon start another game.
Once the pup leaves its litter mates & joins a new pack (your family) it still needs to continue its learning through playtime with you, the family & other, carefully chosen, doggy playmates.
Puppy play can be rough & humans don't have a convenient covering of thick hair all over their arms & legs so pups have to be taught not to bite (mouthing & bite inhibition).
The best way to do this is to use the same method the litter used to indicate the game was becoming too rough - you give a high pitched squeak & end the game suddenly. Once the pup settles down, start the game again. You can also use a growly voiced 'aaaahh' to indicate the game's getting too rough. If the pup responds by toning it down, continue with the play, if the pup keeps getting wilder, squeak & end the game again.
Play should include all the basic obedience exercises. In fact having fun is the key to teaching obedience, ie turn basic obedience exercises into a game!
Take 'sit' for example - as soon as the pup's bottom hits the floor, praise & either reward with a treat or have a quick game of tug or roll a ball a short distance for your pup. Then repeat the 'sit', play the game, do the 'sit', play the game, etc. You'll find this quickly produces a wonderfully quick & reliable .
You can also use this method for the stand, down & come exercises.
Teaching your pup to fetch is another wonderful game. This can be played indoors & outdoors. Using a small soft toy is often the best starting point. Place it a short distance away & encourage your pup to 'fetch' it. Once they pounce & pick it up, call them back with 'come'. Offer a treat or another toy as you say 'give' (toy swapping).
Once they are retrieving a soft toy, use your imagination & get them to 'fetch' all sorts of items - balls, toys, empty drink cans, scrunched up paper, empty plastic milk bottles, etc.
Don't use items of clothing, like socks or shoes or the TV remote as you can't expect the pup to know the difference between your 'good' shoes & the ones they are allowed to pick up.
Another great learning game is 'find'. Start by sitting in a chair & hide something whilst the pup is watching you. For example tuck a small soft toy or a treat under your thigh & say 'find'. Praise as the pup starts to sniff around & give excited praise as they find it.
This game can be extended to finding hidden items under armchairs, behind doors, in the next room, under a pillow or outside in all sorts of places. Use items like their toys, a treat biscuit, a bunch of old keys, your oldest hat, a gardening glove, etc. Even get them to 'find' a person!

Reward based training

by Ginny Legh
Everyone wants a happy dog who is willing, ready & wants to work with you Reward based training is the ideal way to achieve this.
Rewards come in many guises such as food, voice, pats & toys.
As far as your dog is concerned treat foods have different values. Imagine your boss says he is going to pay you with peanuts instead of dollars - you would obviously tell him to go jump in the lake & find a new job with a more realistic boss wouldn't you?
Dogs behave in a similar way. Offer them boring treats, use a flat, boring voice & never play with them & they'll soon lose interest & react by

- no longer listening to you & no longer paying attention
- looking around for something more interesting to do
- putting their nose down & starting to sniff the ground or picking up a stick to chew
- moving away from you & starting to pull on the lead, etc

So how can you 'pay' your dog appropriately?

- Choose high value food treats such as cheese, salami, cabanossi, BBQ chicken, cooked beef sausages, cooked hamburger mince or some of the soft commercial treats such as Chicken Chunkers or Smackos & cut them into small pieces.
- Avoid using hard treats such as kibble & commercially dried liver or beef treats. Puppies, take too long to chew them -'everything has to stop while I finish this bit!'.
- They find their everyday kibble boring - 'you give me this every day'! If they gulp the treat they can choke on it.
- Food treats should be tiny, really tiny - no bigger than a five cent coin. You'll find you can give your dog 2-3 treats of this size & he'll think he's hit the jackpot.
- Talking of jackpots - if your dog does something really well, then quickly reward him with a jackpot. Stop & reward him with your voice & your hands & feed 5-6 treats in quick succession. Attach the word 'jackpot' to this performance - he'll soon learn the meaning of the word.
- Every so often you can reward by having a short 'tuggie' game - just a few seconds is enough. Remember you own the tuggie so put it back in your pocket.
In your first few puppy class lessons you learned to use treats & your 'happy' voice to lure your puppy into doing the exercises.
As you progress you will stop luring, but have tiny treats always at the ready & give them generously. As training progresses you will start to randomise the giving of treats & intersperse it with voice & toy game rewards, in other words you'll keep the dog guessing as to when the reward will appear & what it will be!!
Your voice is often the best treat you can give your dog. A happy, enthusiastic 'yes' can instantly mark the moment when the dog did the right thing. This of course is then followed with a food treat in the early stages of training or when you start training something new.
Once your dog knows the exercise you can reward with the 'yes' every time he does it correctly & randomise the giving of treats (remember a particularly good performance can also earn a jackpot!). All types of reward must be given within 5 seconds of the wanted behaviour occurring or the dog doesn't know what he's being rewarded for.
Use your voice wisely. If you constantly say 'good dog', 'come on', 'heel', 'sit', etc without rewarding, your dog will tune out. The result is the same as when he sits at home with you & takes no notice of your conversation with family & friends or what's on the TV.

A Healthy Dog is a Happy Dog

One of the canine'unmentionables’ Humping

It's a common form of canine communication

Humans tend to associate it with sexual behaviour which is why we find it tremendously embarrassing when our dog humps other dogs, our legs or worse still, our friends' legs. Females do it just as much as males! While mounting does take place in the sexual repertoire, it also occurs during play, during fights & as a lot of dogs owners have discovered, as a means of getting attention & controlling humans.
Humping in dogs is frequently described as a 'dominant' behaviour. Like most behaviours which are commonly ascribed to dominance, such a label grossly oversimplifies the behaviour. What about dogs who 'air hump?' Are they trying to dominate the air?
Humping may be a show of dominance, but it can also certainly be a sign of emotion, whether it be anxiety, overexcitement, stress or even an invitation to play, so a lot depends on the situation.
Here are some of the reasons humping may occur

- Stress or insecurity - often seen in poorly socialised dogs or dogs who are unsure of their environment.
- For attention - some dogs learn to hump other dogs, people or household items because it gets them attention from their owner, even if only negative scolding.
- Reproductive rehearsal - play is often a way for animals to rehearse behaviours & skills which are important to the survival of both the individual & the species. Chasing & biting in play are ways that dogs rehearse hunting behaviours. Biting in play helps dogs learn to control the strength with which they use their teeth when interacting socially with non-prey animals. Mounting in play helps dogs rehearse for breeding later in life.
- Hormones - humping often appears initially during adolescence. Both male & female dogs do it. Sometimes neutering or spaying can decrease the frequency with which this behaviour is displayed, but not always. If the dog has an established history of engaging in this behaviour, neutering or spaying is less likely to solve the problem as it has already become a learned behaviour.
- Medical problems - check with your veterinarian to make sure there is no irritation, infection or inflammation in the genital area. This may be indicated especially when dogs chew or lick at these areas excessively or compulsively.
- Overstimulation - humping may occur when the dog is overstimulated & is no longer able to make appropriate social decisions & is experiencing heightened excitement levels.

How to stop humping behaviour

- remove the reward, even the negative reward of scolding
- ignore the dog by giving no physical attention, no verbal attention & no eye contact
- or substitute behaviour you can reward, such as 'fetch' a toy, 'sit', 'settle' on your mat
- put your dog outside or in another room if you are worried they may 'attack' your friends legs
- if you are outdoors & your dog is with you, keep them on lead
- make sure children don't encourage the humping - kids often think it is funny!

A minute on your mutt

Kennel cough (canine infectious tracheobronchitis)

This is a highly infectious disease that affects the trachea (wind pipe) & causes a severe productive or non-productive cough.

Signs

- Persistent coughing as if something is caught in the throat
- Sometimes coughing in a spasm-like way. Often white frothy foam is produced
- There may be watery discharge from the eyes
- Dogs, otherwise, appear bright & well, appetite is usually normal
- It is rarely fatal & then only with heart or respiratory compromised dogs.
- ONLY dogs are affected
- It is caused by infectious organisms including
- Canine adenovirus 2
- Parainfluenza virus
- Bordatella bronchiseptica (a bacterium)
- The routine C5 vaccination given to most dogs provides some protection but is not 100\% effective.
- Vaccination reduces the severity & the risk of contracting kennel cough.
- It is normally contracted when dogs are in close contact with infected dogs in kennels, at dog shows, in dog training areas, etc., hence the name 'kennel cough'.
- Infected dogs are often well in themselves despite the cough but pneumonia can sometimes follow.
- Less severe cases often resolve themselves without treatment but good care & rest are essential.
- In severe cases, antibiotics are often prescribed by your vet to prevent secondary infections & cough suppressants may help.
- If your dog is showing signs of kennel cough it is wise to consult your vet for advice.

Easter Goodies Yes for humans No for dogs!!

All foods containing chocolate or cocoa are an absolute no-no for dogs.
For some dogs, only a small amount can be fatal.
Foods containing artificial sweetener are also poisonous for dogs.
Other toxic foods for dogs are onions (cooked or raw), nuts (especially macadamias), raisins, grapes & fatty off cuts of pork, ham & bacon.

Never feed cooked bones. Be selective when feeding raw bones - brisket & lamb flaps are often recommended by vets & animal nutritionists.
Chicken wings & necks & turkey necks are alright IF your dog chews them slowly & thoroughly - if he's inclined to swallow them whole, don't give them again, they can cause bowel obstructions.

Proposed change to recording of Trial Results

As there are now so many levels in all of the ANKC approved dog trial events we are proposing that only the achievement of Titles will be published in Yaps & Yelps.

Completion of a NSDTC Application for a Title Trophy will trigger the success to be recorded in the next issue of Yaps & Yelps.

Those who do not wish to apply for a Club trophy but would like their success noted in Yaps & Yelps can email the details to me at ginny.l@tpg.com.au.

Please provide the following information in your email - your name, dog's pet name, Title gained & the date you achieved it.

- NSDTC requires a minimum C3 (distemper, hepatitis, parvovirus) vaccination administered after the age of 12 weeks for all puppies less than 12 months old.
Please Note. A delay of two weeks after the final puppy vaccinations is required before puppies are permitted to join classes.
All adult dogs (over 12 months old) joining or renewing, must have had at least a C3 vaccination administered after 12 months of age. Triennial (3-yearly) C3 vaccination is considered acceptable thereafter.
